

Week 5 — Pause, Notice, and Adjust

Looking Back at Your First Five Weeks

Pausing gives you an opportunity to recognize what you have learned. You may notice changes in strength, stamina, balance, mobility, confidence, recovery, or how you respond when something does not go as planned.

Wellness Practice: Hydration & Energy

As you begin the final week of your Hydration & Energy Wellness Practice, consider what is becoming easier, what still needs support, and what you may want to continue. Bring your observations and questions to the Zoom gathering.

Bringing Your Information Together

Look across your Weekly Journeys, Class Records, and Exercise Pages. Consider:

- What stands out
- What feels different
- What remains challenging
- What has helped
- What you may want to adjust
- What you want to continue

This Week's Practice Focus

Pause after one class or everyday activity and identify one thing you noticed and one adjustment that may help.

Pausing helps me recognize what I have learned and choose what comes next.

My Week 5 Guide

What to Notice and Where to Record It

Use this guide with the facing My Week 2 Journey page. Each number points to the place where you will record what stands out.

1 — Return to My Real-Life Focus

Think about the everyday activity or experience you chose. Consider what a manageable challenge might feel like within that activity.

Record it in Section 1.

2 — Notice Across My Classes

Notice how movement options, resistance, pace, support, and recovery affect your experience.

Use your class cards, then record what stands out in Section 2.

3 — Consider My Wellness Connection

Think about what may have influenced how challenging an activity felt this week.

Record what stands out in Section 3.

4 — Connect It to Everyday Life

Notice where changing your pace, effort, option, or support helped you participate in everyday life.

Record the connection in Section 4.

5 — Pause and Reflect

Consider what you discovered about choosing a challenge that fits you.

Complete Section 5.
